Guardian Familiars receive a +4 racial bonus to listen and spot checks.

Nine Lives (Ex): The guardian familiar has nine lives. Each time it is slain, up to the 9th time, it is instantly reborn stronger than before. At each rebirth, it gains a magical bonus of +1 to Hit Dice, AC, SR, attack and damage, as well as +5ft. to its movement. Thus, if it is slain four times, it will be reborn as a 5HD creature with AC 16, SR 14, a speed of 50ft., and do 1d4+4 points of damage with each claw and 1d6+4 damage with its bite.

Provided the spell resistance is overcome, the increasing power of the familiar can be stopped by any of the following spells: disintegrate, flesh to stone, temporal stasis, or wish. An unholy word spell banishes it back to its plane of origin. It has only animal intelligence and returns to rest on top of the treasure (as well as returning to its original shape) if melee is suspended, regaining any of the lives it lost as well. Though it starts out as a small black cat, it reaches the size of a bobcat by its largest growth cycle. – Dangerous Denizens pg. 82

ERRATTA
1) The DC for the Fort save versus the blackbolt of the coin of power is DC10 + the level of the user (including levels gained from the magic of the coin).
3) The DC save for corruption and dependence are DC 10 + the number of times the powers associated with or derived from the coin are used (including powers gained from class levels provided by the coin). This save is required each day a power (including those associated with the additional class levels) are used.
4) The dates on Dairoo's map are the clue. All of them are red herrings except for the date that matches the date of Dairoo's death. This is the clue that Dairoo created to lead his descendants to the Dark Hills and thus, the site of the fallen star.
5) Showing Veoden's Tower on Dairoo's map is a typo.
6) The guardian familiar can definitely be immobilized without killing it. The text even gives an example of doing so. It will not leave to pursue someone who has taken something from the chest. But if the chest itself is stolen, it will try to retrieve it as well as a creature with animal intelligence can.

7) Poletegeists also appeared in the Aldriv's Revenge adventure. Damage done is by weapon or item type as they fling them at their opponents.
